The Miami Beach Antique Jewelry & Watch Show Reports Strong Attendance and Exhibitor Sales in 2007 Nov 7

dmg world media today reported strong attendance and exhibitor sales at the 15th annual Miami Beach Antique Jewelry & Watch Show, which was held Oct. 26-28 at the Miami Beach Convention Center in Miami Beach, Fla.

MIAMI Fla. “The dealers were very happy with the foot traffic that visited their booths and with the number of individuals who purchased both large and small-ticket items from them,” said Andrea Canady, show manager for dmg media group’s Miami Beach Antique Jewelry & Watch Show. “We tried to make the show as intimate as possible so that both the dealers and visitors had a good selling and buying experience. The feedback that we received from our dealers about the show was very positive.”

Here’s what a few show exhibitors had to say about their experience at the show:

Patrizia di Carrobio with Patrizia Ferenczi Inc. said, “The antique jewelry market is currently very strong and many consumers at the show this year were interested in buying high-end pieces that are one-of-a kind. Overall, we had a good presence at the show.”

We were pleased with the number of consumers that visited our booth,” said Maurice Moradof with Yafa Jewelry Inc. “Buyers were seeking out the more expensive, high-ticket items, which seems to be the current trend. The jewelry we had on display went over well with buyers.”

Steven Neckman with Steven Neckman Inc. said, “Our signed pieces and designed pieces seemed to intrigue buyers this year. In addition, since the U.S. dollar has been weak, we’ve seen a lot of interest from European buyers.”

The 2008 Miami Beach Antique Jewelry & Watch Show is set for Oct. 24 to 26, 2008. For show information, please call (239) 732-6642 or visit www.dmgantiqueshows.com.
